What is Friendship?

A

People can share their thoughts and feelings with friends frankly. You can speak openly and never worry about being judged by them. They know all about you; your good points and your bad points, and they accept ①both.

This means ②you don't always have to agree with friends' opinions. You don't have to stay silent when you want to disagree with them. As well as being honest, you greatly value your friends' opinions — even when ③(your / are / own / from / they / different).

Maintaining friendships can sometimes be difficult, but friends make our lives richer. ④Because of them, we are able to speak from the heart and become more understanding as well as more caring individuals.
